

DHS Solicits For Another 21.6 Million Rounds Of Ammo

February 7, 2013 by Tim Brown

With ammunition at not only a seasonal low, but also low because of the fear of unconstitutional Federal laws being looked at, it has now come to light that the Department of Homeland Security is once again soliciting for another 21.6 million more rounds of ammunition. This is in addition to the billions of rounds already solicited just last year by the Federal government, including DHS. It's getting more and more difficult for citizens to purchase any ammo, let alone in bulk, but it looks like there may be plenty of businesses and front groups that are willing to provide "Big Sis" with all the ammunition they want.

A solicitation posted yesterday on the Fed Bid website details how the bullets are required for the DHS Federal Law Enforcement Training Center in Artesia, New Mexico.

DHS is looking to purchase 10 million pistol cartridge .40 caliber 165 grain, jacketed hollow point bullets and 10 million 9mm 115 grain jacketed hollow point bullets.

The solicitation also includes 1.6 million pistol cartridge 9mm ball bullets.

Paul Joseph Watson helps to put the quantities of ammunition purchased by DHS into perspective:

An approximation of how many rounds of ammunition the DHS has now secured over the last 10 months stands at around 1.625 billion. In March 2012, ATK announced that they had agreed to provide the DHS with a maximum of 450 million bullets over four years, a story that prompted questions about why the feds were buying ammunition in such large quantities.

To put that in perspective, during the height of active battle operations in Iraq, US soldiers used 5.5 million rounds of ammunition a month.

Extrapolating the figures, the DHS has purchased enough bullets over the last 10 months to wage a full scale war for almost 30 years.

Such massive quantities of ammo purchases have stoked fears that the agency is preparing for some kind of domestic unrest. In 2011, Department of Homeland Security chief Janet Napolitano directed Immigration and Customs Enforcement to prepare for a mass influx of immigrants into the United States, calling for the plan to deal with the “shelter” and “processing” of large numbers of people.

Just recently DHS put in a solicitation for 7,000 “personal defense weapons” that shoot 5.56 NATO ammunition that have “fire select” capability along with high capacity 30 round magazines. Remember these are for “homeland” use, not foreign.

Back in December DHS solicited for 250 million rounds of .40 caliber ammunition.

In September, DHS solicited for nearly 200 million rounds of sniper ammunition.

In August 750 million rounds of high power ammunition were also solicited and in March DHS solicited 450 million rounds of hollow point bullets.

Last month the Evian Group, an organization that was formed just five days before DHS put out an announcement of solicitation for ammunition, was awarded the contract for 200,000 round of ammunition. James Smith reports,

The winner of this contract is Evian Group, Inc. located at 105 South Eastern Ave, Las Vegas Nevada.

Well congratulations Evian Group, you've shown the Federal Government what it means to be naïve.

It seems that the Evian Group was formed on December 12, 2012, just 5 days before the announcement of the solicitation.

Smith's report is a good one demonstrating that the Evian group appears to be a front group with no building or capability for manufacturing of ammunition.

So the question remains, why is a domestic agency of the United States Federal government purchasing such large caches of ammunition in a short period of time? Yes, I'm aware that agents much qualify and practice, but seriously this seems to be getting a bit out of hand, especially to be used in American soil. I'll leave you to your own conclusions.
